

R.C.S. HEADQUARTERS

The B5 building is part of the Rizzoli – Corriere della Sera Mediagroup's district, one of the major Italian publishing houses, which is relocating its offices in the north-east part of Milan.

This five storey building façade aims to be an element of continuity with the surrounding buildings in the district. It's covered with coloured and silk-screened glass panels with the additional presence of vertical glazing elements that come out from the edge of the front, constituting a sun barrier. These elements, with colours as well, represent the matrix with which the entire RCS settlement has been developed.
